FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Montana Bar Association Committee on Continuing Legal Education will sponsor a conference in April to brief lawyers on the new securities law passed by the 1961 Montana Legislature.

The conference on "Securities Regulation Problems in the General Practice" will be in session at the Rainbow Hotel, Great Falls, Friday and Saturday, April 7 and 8, according to Montana State University Law Dean Robert E. Sullivan, chairman of the MBA committee and member of the American Bar Association Committee on Continuing Legal Education.

James Newton, regional administrator of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Seattle, Wash., will conduct the conference sessions and will be available for question periods and discussion, Dean Sullivan said. Newton will integrate the new Montana law and the provisions of federal acts in his presentation, and he will devote the Saturday morning session to discussion of Regulation A of the new law.

The conference will be in session Friday from 10:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. and Saturday from 10 a. m. to noon, the dean said. Following adjournment at noon Saturday, Newton will be available for consultation on individual problems.

The registration fee of five dollars, payable to George Crotty, 333 Ford Bldg., Great Falls, may be sent to Crotty in advance or paid at the registration desk upon arrival, Dean Sullivan said. Registrants should address requests for room reservations at the Rainbow Hotel to Warren Anderson, Manager, and should identify themselves as conference participants, he added.
